HOSPITALITY & ENTERTAINMENT

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

This Code of Ethics and Business Conduct (“Code”) has been approved by the Event Hospitality & Entertainment Limited (“Event”) Board of Directors for use within the Event controlled companies and other managed, licensed or branded entities across Australia, New Zealand and Germany (collectively referred to as the “Event Group” or the “Group”).

The principles in this Code are to serve you as a guide to help in ensuring that sound, ethical decisions are made that are in the best interests of the Event Group. However, you should recognize that the Code does not provide a set of rules to cover every situation or challenge you may face. You should understand the principles laid out in this document, and use them to guide your individual behaviour, and in doing so set an example for others to follow.

The principles of the Code are taken very seriously by management and any departure from it is unacceptable. As an employee of the Event Group, you must, therefore, strive to maintain the high standards of business ethics and personal integrity that the Code requires.

You are also required to adhere to our Event Values:

- Empowerment (Step up and be accountable);
- Possibilities (Always evolve and improve); and
- Community (Strong teams, better together).

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

You are expected to become familiar with the Code and to apply these principles in the daily performance of your job responsibilities.

CODE OF ETHICS

As an Event Group employee, you must ensure you have the conviction to embrace the highest standard of honesty, integrity and ethical behaviour. You must promise only what you can reasonably expect to deliver. You must strive to keep your commitments. You must not engage in activities that create, or even appear to create, conflict between personal interests and the interests of the Group. You must always tell the truth. You must not engage in activities, conduct or behaviours that create, or appear to create, a potential reputational issue to Event.

High standards of personal integrity, must guide your conduct. Your fellow employees, Event's shareholders, customers, and those with whom the Group does business, must be able to trust what you say and to believe that you will always keep your word.

CODE OF CONDUCT - EMPLOYEES

Respect for Individuals

Event seeks to promote a working environment free of unlawful intimidation, victimisation, discrimination, bullying, sexual harassment and harassment. As an employee, you should speak out if you observe conduct that runs contrary to this principle. You are also expected to be sensitive and respectful of the legitimate concerns, values and preferences of others.

Respect for individuals means that employees are expected to:

- model professional behaviour at all times (including at events outside of the specific work location);
- be respectful to others;
- act with integrity;
- be honest in their communications with others (especially during any workplace investigations);

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

- not act in a manner in which Event loses trust and confidence in you;
- use their best endeavours to protect and promote Event's reputation and not place it into possible disrepute;
- set a high standard of performance and conduct;
- comply with all of Event's policies and procedures that are applicable to their role and responsibilities (including but not limited to not acting in a manner that intimidates, victimises, discriminates, bullies, sexually harasses or harasses anyone else);
- comply with all work, health and safety requirements to not only protect yourself but also others in the workplace;
- speak up when they witness employees acting contrary to our policies and procedures.

Respect for Diversity

Diversity is the variety of unique skills, abilities, experiences and cultural backgrounds that enables people to achieve superior business and personal results. In accordance with its legal obligations, Event is committed to recognising the talents and job performance of its employees and values the contributions that come from people with different backgrounds and perspectives. Event recognises that this diversity brings many benefits, for instance, ways of thinking and approaches to decision-making that can strengthen the Group and make us more successful. Event values highly the differences among individuals, and welcomes diversity within the workforce. Event supports and obeys laws that prohibit discrimination everywhere the Group does business. Event has policies and planning efforts that are designed to help the Group implement its equal employment opportunity objectives. All levels of supervision are responsible for monitoring and complying with Event's policies and procedures for handling employee complaints concerning unlawful harassment or discrimination. Event is committed to ensuring opportunities for all employees to develop their abilities and contribute to the Group's success.

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

Job Performance

Employees are selected and placed based on their personal qualifications, attributes and skills for the job. Event expects all employees to give their best efforts, learn from their successes and setbacks, and pursue opportunities to improve their performance on their own initiative, as well as through learning programs offered by the Group.

Event encourages self-development and will assist employees in mastering their current jobs and improving their job skills. Event rewards employees based on the quality of the work they do and the contributions they make to the Event Group and the work environment.

Employee Health and Safety

In accordance with legal obligations, Event actively promotes the health and safety of employees with policies and practical programs that help individuals safeguard themselves and their co-workers. Event believes a safe working environment is paramount and that a healthy, productive workforce contributes significantly to the Group's performance and success. All employees have a responsibility to ensure that the Group's products, services and operations, meet applicable government health and safety standards, and Event standards.

Dealing with Third Parties

Event's strength and longevity are the result of the ability to sustain long-lasting, mutually rewarding relationships with customers, suppliers, investors, and others with whom the Group does business. Event will continuously work to strengthen these relationships, to listen, learn, and innovate, through conscientious, trustworthy behaviour and constant attention to the results and quality of work.

Customer Relationships

Event has built its reputation by listening to customers, understanding their needs, and delivering products and services that help them succeed. The customers of the Event Group expect the best and all employees must ensure that individual decisions and actions contribute to a positive perception of the Group, enhance customers' satisfaction, and promote their loyalty. All employees must aim to deliver the highest possible value in the products and services offered to the Group's customers. Event's commitment to continuous improvement makes that possible.

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

Investor Relationships

The Event Group grows by constantly promoting the long-term interests of owners and shareholders. Event strives to do this through sustained growth, profitability and protection of assets. In accordance with continuous disclosure requirements, Event keeps investors, creditors, share markets, employees, and the general public informed on a timely basis through public release of relevant information about the Event Group. Information should only be released by authorised employees after approval has been received by the Event Board or that Board's delegated representatives. In releasing information about the Group, employees must make every effort to ensure that full disclosure is made to everyone without preference or favouritism to any individual or group of investors.

Supplier and Other Relationships

Event works with many other companies and organisations. The Group seeks strong, mutually rewarding business relationships with those who can enhance the quality of the Group's products and services. The Group looks for suppliers and business allies who demonstrate strong values and ethical principles and who support the commitment to quality. Event avoids those who violate the law or fail to comply with sound business practices. No supplier is required to buy Event Group products in order to compete for business or to continue as a supplier. Event encourages fair competition amongst potential suppliers, contractors, and other vendors. Event submitted its first Modern Slavery Statement to the Australian Border Force in March 2021 and will continue to do so in accordance with applicable modern slavery legislation.

World Wide Business Practices

The Event Group is a group operating in a number of countries and understands that there are many differing economic and political philosophies and forms of government throughout the world. The Event Group acknowledge the wide diversity that exists among the social customs and cultural traditions of the countries in which the Group operates. The Event Group respects such differences, and to the extent that the Group can do so in keeping with the principles of this Code, it will maintain the flexibility to adapt business practices to social and cultural differences. Event will leverage global experiences to achieve the best results for the Event Group.

Environmental Responsibility

As a Group, we strive to contribute toward a global environment in which all people live healthy, productive lives, now and in the future. Event understands that products and services must support sustainable development of global resources and that they are expected to conform to applicable regulations and standards wherever they are sold. At all times, the Group endeavors to maintain environmentally sound policies and practices for all activities and strives to provide customers with products and services that are both safe and environmentally friendly. All employees are required to be alert to these environmental policies and must be familiar with environmental laws, applicable to their areas of business. Where appropriate the Group has implemented environmental reporting systems to ensure that the activities of the Group's businesses are conducted in compliance with relevant environmental legislation and regulations. Employees are required to ensure that the proper reporting systems are followed and that all possible steps are taken to adhere to the environmental laws and requirements.

Event will educate and encourage customers to use and enjoy products and services in environmentally responsible ways. The Group offers leadership and financial support to industry and community initiatives that share the Group's commitment to the environment.

Event and the Community

As individuals and as a Group, we contribute significant time and resources to promoting the health, welfare, and economic stability of the communities in which the Group operates. The Event Group, through the establishment of a Charity Committee, has a formalized system in place to co-ordinate a comprehensive and proactive approach by Group businesses and employees to support selected charities and community organisations.

Ownership and Investment

The Event Group investments must be compatible with social and economic priorities, local laws, customs, and traditions of the countries where the Group operates. In all cases, conduct should promote acceptance and respect for the Event Group. Event also expects that host countries will recognise the need for stability, growth, and business success, and that they will honour their agreements, including those relating to rights and properties of citizens of other nations.

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

Competitive Conduct

In accordance with its legal obligations, Event believes that fair competition is fundamental to free enterprise. In relationships with competitors, dealers, suppliers and customers, employees must avoid arrangements that restrict the Group's ability to compete with others. There must be no arrangements or understandings with competitors affecting prices, terms upon which products are sold, or the number and type of products offered or sold.

Event supports laws that prohibit restraint of trade, unfair practices, or abuse of economic power, and all employees must abide by them. Event trusts that governments will make and apply such laws clearly and uniformly.

Whistleblowing

Event is committed to supporting employees who make a genuine complaint about non-compliant, suspicious or unethical conduct by other employees of the Event Group, regardless of seniority of those involved in the alleged conduct. Event's commitment includes the promise to protect the confidentiality and position of employees wishing to raise serious matters that affect the integrity of the Event Group.

However, it is also of the utmost importance that complaints are made frankly, honestly and without any ulterior motive. If a complaint is untruthful, malicious or has an ulterior motive, then this may be grounds for disciplinary action.

Conflict of Interest

The Event Group recognises and respects the rights of employees to maintain financial interests in outside investments, businesses or other activities so long as those activities are legal and do not impair, interfere or conflict with the conscientious performance of duties and do not involve damage or misuse of the Event Group's name, trademarks, or reputation. In all business relationships with outside persons or organisations, and in all personal business undertakings, employees of the Group are required to avoid personal transactions, situations or involvements in which personal interests actually conflict with, or may have the appearance of conflicting with, those of the Group.

Close Personal Relationships

The Event Group recognises that employees may have, or enter into, close personal relationships in the workplace. 'Close personal relationships' means any romantic, intimate and/or sexual relationship including (but not limited to) dating, co-habiting, marriage or civil partnership, as well as close family relationships (including those with parents, children, siblings, or extended family members).

In many cases such relationships will not impact on the workplace. However, in some cases close personal relationships at work can lead to difficulties including, but not limited to, actual or perceived conflicts of interest, breaches of confidentiality, embarrassment of other staff, claims of differential treatment or claims of inappropriate workplace behaviour. The Event Group has a responsibility to ensure that everyone behaves in an appropriate and professional way at work.

Employees are required to disclose to the senior executive for their division if they have or are in a close personal relationship:

- where one party to the relationship is a member of the executive team;
- where one party to the relationship reports directly or indirectly to the other;
- where one party may make or be involved in decisions about the other person's employment;
- with another employee in the same department; and/or
- with a client or supplier with whom the employee has material contact in the course of their role.

Employees should also disclose any other close personal relationship where the relationship is likely to give rise to an actual or perceived conflict of interest. Any disclosures will be treated sensitively and will only be shared to the extent required to implement any necessary changes in working arrangements. Failure to disclose a close personal relationship where required under this Code may lead to disciplinary action.

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

The Event Group may make any adjustments it considers reasonably necessary to address any issues or concerns. These reasonable adjustments may include (but are not limited to) temporarily or permanently changing workplace arrangements such as the department in which an employee works, reporting lines or decision-makers in relation to the employee's employment.

Employees who have any questions or concerns about close personal relationships in the workplace, including whether they are required to disclose a close personal relationship, should contact the senior executive for their division or the Company Secretary.

Safeguarding Assets

To remain competitive and to serve the interests of shareholders, the Event Group goes to great lengths to preserve, protect, and use responsibly all assets. This includes tangible as well as intangible assets, such as brands, trade secrets, technology, business information, and intellectual property. As Event employees, we have a personal responsibility to safeguard the Group's assets from loss, theft, or misuse, and to use every available means, electronic, technical, physical, procedural, and legal, to protect these assets at all times.

Employees are required to protect the Group's intellectual assets, such as trade secrets, confidential financial information, new product development plans, and other sensitive corporate and personal information, through careful attention to interpersonal communication, the secure use of all communications media and, where appropriate, legally enforceable agreements.

Employees must not make unauthorised disclosure of trade secrets, confidential or sensitive information belonging to the Event Group, customers, or suppliers, either during employment by the Event Group or thereafter. In a similar manner while the Group may hire individuals who have knowledge and experience in various technical areas, the Group does not employ people as a means of gaining access to trade secrets and sensitive information of others and employees will not be asked to reveal confidences.

Improper Payments

In dealing with public officials, other corporations, and private citizens, all Group employees must adhere to ethical business practices. No Group employee must be influenced by, or seek to influence others, either directly or indirectly, by paying or receiving bribes or kickbacks, or by any other measure that is unethical or will tarnish the Group's reputation for honesty and integrity. Even the appearance of such conduct must be avoided.

Employees must avoid payment of gratuities or "tips" to public officials to expedite or obtain routine governmental actions, except where such practices are lawful and customary. In such cases, payments must be limited to customary amounts.

Employees must also not accept gifts, favours, or entertainment that obligate or appear to obligate employees or the Group to act in any way contrary to the law or the Group's ethical business practices

Financial Reports and Accounting Records

Investors, creditors, and others have a legitimate interest in the Event Group's financial and accounting information. The integrity of the Event financial reporting and accounting records is based on validity, accuracy, and completeness of information supporting entries to the Event Group's books of account. Event will ensure every accounting or financial entry accurately reflects that which is described by the supporting information. Event expects employees involved in creating, processing, or recording such information to be personally responsible for its integrity. Employees have a responsibility to ensure that false or intentionally misleading entries are not made. The same standards of integrity that apply to external financial reporting also apply to the financial statements that are used as internal management tools.

Inside Information and Share Trading

Any employee who has undisclosed information about the Event Group must not use it for personal gain or provide it to others. Employees may at no time deal in any Event shares when they are in possession of price sensitive information. Such information which may include, certain financial data, technical materials, and future plans, may have significant value to others and therefore must always be kept confidential. In addition, an employee who has undisclosed information about a supplier, customer, or competitor should not trade in that company's shares. We expect all employees, their families, and others whose relationships with the Event Group give them access to such information to comply with these principles. Event has an established general policy whereby Directors, Senior Executives and staff in possession of, or access to, price sensitive information can only buy or sell shares in Event in the six-week period immediately following any price sensitive announcement including the half year and full year results announcements, and the Annual General Meeting.

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

Political Contributions and Participation

Event encourages employees to participate in public matters and political processes according to their individual beliefs. However, no political contribution shall be made by or on behalf of the Event Group by any employee without the direct approval of the Event Chairman.

Public Communication

The public's acceptance of Event's conduct is just as important as customers' acceptance of the Group's products and services. Therefore it imperative that Event responds to public inquiries from the media, governments, and others, with prompt, courteous, honest answers through members of the executive team and/or employees who are authorised to speak publicly on behalf of Event.

Surveillance

As a necessary part of the Group's business, Event utilises various forms of surveillance technology on an ongoing, intermittent basis and it is important that all employees are aware of the range of surveillance activities undertaken by the Group.

The Group will continue to conduct surveillance activities, although it is possible that the surveillance activities will change over time to meet business needs and accommodate new technology.

The surveillance methods adopted by the Group typically falls into one of the following three categories:

Video surveillance

Video surveillance is conducted at various locations throughout the Event Group. This surveillance may include both real time monitoring, and the recording of images. However, except as otherwise permitted by law, all video surveillance:

CODE OF ETHICS AND BUSINESS CONDUCT

- is conducted using visible closed-circuit camera equipment;
- is primarily conducted for security and other business protection purposes; and
- will not be used in any change room, toilet facility or shower or other bathing facility.

Computer surveillance

Employee use of the Group's computers, information technology resources (including computer related software) and computer network may be monitored, either in real time or through the collection and storage of data and information on the individual computers and/or the network. This includes all internet and email usage. Most commonly, this data and information is recorded through normal computer operations (including the storage of temporary files, cache memory and usage logs) but may also include other forms of software installed by the Group (or on the Group's behalf) from time to time.

When using an Event Group computer, information technology resources and the computer network, all employees should at all times assume that usage is being monitored and/or recorded and that such data and information may be reviewed by Event.

Event also reserves the right to block access to internet sites which it regards as inappropriate.

Tracking surveillance

Employees may be issued with proximity access control cards. These cards are used to restrict and monitor access to certain Event Group premises. The usage of these access control cards is monitored, recorded and reviewed by the Event Group from time to time. Without limitation, the information typically recorded includes the card number and the time and point of entry.

Other matters

This Code is not a term of any contract, including any contract of employment, and is not binding on Event. This Code may be reviewed, varied, added to or withdrawn by Event from time to time, in its absolute discretion.
